Topic: "A Marriage of Common Interests--Performance, Affordability, and Accountability"

The $24-billion/25-year Deepwater Program entails the progressive modernization, conversion, and recapitalization of the Coast Guard's aging legacy assets and systems. For an enterprise of Deepwater's scope and complexity, sound business intelligence and system-of-systems thinking are indispensable. Acquisition, program execution, and financial management are woven together in this paradigm--with transaction cycles and total-ownership-cost accountability providing the glue that binds. In this sense, the acquisition community, the chief financial officer, and the operator form a marriage of common interests guided by performance, affordability, and accountability.

Speaker: Mr. Robert Horowitz, Chief Financial Officer, USCG

Topic: Coast Guard's Transition to DHS from the CFO perspective

Summary of Speaker's Comments

At the Chapter's August luncheon, Mr. Bob Horowitz, USCG CFO, provided an educational and entertaining talk on "The Coast Guard's Transition to DHS from a CFO Perspective." He presented a brief history of the transition to show how rapidly events changed.

Background. Initially, these events resulted in changes to major financial system development decisions. In the years 1998 – 2002, the CG was in the process of obtaining its own accounting system, CG Oracle Financials (CGOF). However, during this time, DOT continued to lobby the CG to join its new DOT Oracle financial system, DELPHI. On 5 June 2002, the decision was made to move the CG to DELPHI. On 6 June 2002, President Bush made his announcement to establish DHS. Because this put the move to DELPHI on hold, the CG went back to developing CGOF. On 30 July 2002, OMB directed that work on all IT projects over $500K for DHS agencies must get their approval. Development on CGOF was again at risk of being suspended. However, the CG was able to obtain approval to continue work on CGOF. This shows the extremely fast paced and often chaotic nature of events. Mr. Horowitz, wearing his DOT hat, likened the transition to the stages of life.

Prenatal Stage. In the early or prenatal days from June 2002 to November 2002, Mr. Horowitz joined the CFOs of other bureaus slated to become part of DHS in a working group whose goal was to serve a proactive role in establishing the new department. The task of joining together 21 separate financial systems is a real challenge.

Infant Stage. The infant stage began on 25 November 2002 when President Bush signed the legislation establishing DHS. Ms. Janet Hale was named Under Secretary for Management soon thereafter. A transition planning office was established and staffed by detailees from agencies, including the Coast Guard. By January 2003, the informal CFO group had expanded to over 50 people. Secretary Ridge was sworn in on 24 January 2003. At this point, Mr. Horowitz doffed his DHS hat. The DHS CFO was appointed in late January 2003 and focused on preparing a departmental budget. Coast Guard procurement personnel helped the new Secretary buy pens, pencils, computers, etc.

Toddler Stage. The toddler phase began on 1 March 2003 when most bureaus transferred from their parent departments to DHS. The CG provided finance, accounting and operational contracting support to the Office of the Secretary and is working with TSA to support them. Through all of this, the CG Finance Center successfully implemented the Coast Guard's new core accounting system, Coast Guard Oracle Financials (CGOF), in June 2003, closed old Treasury budget accounts and transferred balances to new DHS accounts while undergoing the annual financial statement audit with a new audit firm.

The transition is still not over. It continues with the need for flexibility to deal with additional changes.

Lessons Learned. Several lessons learned have been identified from the transition. The four elements for successful major transitions are personnel, preparation, intact nature of the transition, and an active role by senior management in the transition. The CG financial and procurement communities met all of these. Dedicated people, commitment to preparation, and early engagement in the transition process paid many dividends. We learned that good, dedicated people get the job done even in a chaotic environment. The CG finance and procurement communities have a real sense of accomplishment in helping to establish the new department.
