FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE – May 31, 2017 TWQA and WQA Calls Attention to Door-to-Door Scams

The Texas Water Quality Association (TWQA) in conjunction with the Water Quality Association (WQA) is calling attention to individuals claiming to be employees of TWQA and/or WQA going door-to-door passing themselves off as water inspectors, offering to test homeowner's drinking water, or using scare tactics to sell water treatment devices.

TWQA Executive Director Daina Grace stated that "neither the Texas Water Quality Association or the Water Quality Association solicit door-to-door, period. The Associations represent the water quality industry and does not sell products or solicit to test water for the public. Both TWQA and WQA have a strict code of ethics for companies that join the Associations. Neither Association condones misrepresentation as TWQA or WQA or the use of scare tactics to generate business."

You can find water treatment professionals who have committed to abide by the TWQA Code of Ethics by going to www.twqa.org and click on Find a Dealer.

For information regarding WQA professionals, visit their website at www.wqa.org.

Please feel free to contact the TWQA office at 361-573-6707 or by email at twqadirector@twqa.org if you have any questions or concerns.

The Texas Water Quality Association (TWQA) is a non-profit state trade association, formed over 40 years ago, to ensure the right of the individuals and companies in the water treatment industry to conduct business in a professional manner that benefits not only those treatment professionals, but also the consumers of the State of Texas. The Association is made up of retailers, wholesalers, manufacturers, suppliers and other involved and/or interested parties.
