

Whatever You Do, Do Not Settle!

by Claresa Baggs

How many times have you settled, both personally and professionally?

I have settled more times than I dare count!

Often because of self doubt, but more often than not, because of defeatist external stimuli.

I have been told that I have a sharp tongue, that I should stay in my place and that I “ain’t shit, never were shit and never would be shit”.

As you can image that kind of input into ones psyche plays a major role in settling for less and just accepting what you’ve been told that you deserve. Even worse, we begin to believe the falsities, and manifest them as truths.

Even worse than setting is acceptance that things will never change and that such is life.

Motion requires energy, stored and kinetic. Negative and positive.

Often that motion needs to be in reverse in order to address and fix whatever is feeding into your unbelief. But while you’re there, the stored energy of positivity is building, storing, and preparing for an explosion of magnificence!

Imagine if you collided the negative and positive, outside and internal energy!

Imagine if you turned your misconceptions on their head!

Imagine if you began to believe in your self worth!

Oh imagine the possibilities! #ISpeakLife
