Welcome,

From: Children First Learning Center, Inc.

From documented education research, we know that children learn by doing, it is through active involvement with their environment that they make sense of the world around them. Children learn simple concepts and then use these concepts to understand more complex ideas. Young children view the world concretely, yet their view changes as they mature. By interacting with their physical environment (indoor and Outdoor) and their social environment (other children and adults), they continually broaden their frame of references.

Through the Creative Curriculum, children can:

Develop a senses of trust when teachers:

- Follow a consistent schedule,
- Carry through on announced plans or promises
- Make contact with each child during the day and by making positive comments about children's play activities.

Develop a sense of competence when teachers:

- Reinforce their play activities by letting them know that their actions are valued.
- Give them developmentally appropriate materials to play with and provides them with materials that build on their strengths, praise their efforts. This helps channel their frustration and encourages them to see tasks through completion.

Develop a sense of initiatives when teaches:

- Provide them with ample opportunities for creative expression by allowing them to freely explore their environment this permits children to get messy during sand, water, or arts activities
- Provide dramatic play and story telling opportunities for children to work through problems and encourage children to work independently, to take risks, to problem solve, and to apply learned knowledge to fresh situations.

A major goal of the Creative Curriculum is to help children develop a positive attitude toward learning. Children are encourages too ask questions and explore. This in turn enhances their ability to solve problems, recognize cause-and effect relationship and plan.

Children not only have unique patterns of development but also come with their own interest, experiences, and learning styles. Individuating means that teachers know each child's preferences and interests and use this information that create a learning environment appropriate for each child. Individualization growth by building on each child's interest.

In the creative curriculum, assisting children's learning is viewed as a joint effort of both teacher and parents. This partnership helps to ensure that the program will meet the needs of each child and that learning and growth will be supported at home.

An effective partnership begins with mutual respect and trust. Each party brings something important to the relationship. Teachers bring knowledge of child development and early childhood education. The parents bring specialized knowledge and experiences; and have a wealth of information about their child. Teachers have an obligation to respond to parents' expectations and to help them understand and appreciate how a developmentally appropriate curriculum will offer the best opportunity for their children success now and in the future.
