

BACK IN BUSINESS

Labour Force Survey

Today's Labour Force data indicates that an additional one-million Canadians have returned to work as provinces and territories continue to get back to business and reopen their local economies, albeit at various stages.

We do see some optimism in today's numbers, at least in COVID19 terms, as Canada's unemployment rate has improved to 12.3%.

Our journey to recovery will largely be underpinned by how effectively Canadians can get back to work. In order to facilitate such an effective recovery, we must develop an efficient path away from emergency subsidies and towards a growth-driven recovery.
